Case presentation by Dr. Syamala Nelapatla PG-1 (M.M) under the guidance of Dr. G.M. Moogi MD (HOM), PRINCIPAL & HOD (M.M), and a pre diagnosed case of COPD and hiatus hernia was discussed.

OBJECTIVE was to understand the scope of homeopathic treatment in such surgical and incurable cases where there is permanent solution through homeopathic medications.

INTRODUCTION was given through a case where in a male patient aged 73yrs came with complaint of difficulty in breathing and distension of abdomen with ineffectual urge for stools.

The case was taken according to the case format mentioned in organon 6th edition. A detailed case history was taken starting from the preliminary data, chief complaints, history of chief complaints, past history, family history, personal history, life space investigation, general examination and particular examination the affected systems, homeopathic totality, repertorial analysis, detailed explanation of disease and investigations performed, probable remedies with detailed differentiating explanation, final remedy with potency and further follow ups were explained in the case.

Later this case was discussed in materia medica aspect with many differentiating drugs and explaining the constitutional types, with pictorial representations.

Each and every aspect of the case was explored like, the miasmatic background, the repertorial analysis, the differential diagnosis in comparison with the patient condition.

Lastly the follow ups of the patient were discussed with gradual improvement in the condition and scope of homeopathy in treating such complex cases was discussed. The presentation was too lengthy yet much information about the disease pathology and drug pathology was explained, more over the selection of remedy was constitutional base hence the physical and mental makeup of the patient was discussed, several corrections were also told to be made for the next presentation and was advised to avoid the explanation of differential diagnosis rather was advised to be told orally with these correction and discussions the session ended.
